On target: Indoor range helps boost the popularity of archery

by Andy Holloway

Playing with bows and arrows does not mean cowboys and Indians anymore for 12-year-old Chuck Hopkins and his friends.

Archery is now serious business for Hopkins, who has been shooting since he got a bow for Christmas last year. And what a bow. Hopkins shoots with a compound bow that can be adjusted to fit its owner's strength. Compound bows can be made from such exotic compounds as carbon glass and Dacron, a far cry from the flimsy balsa wood with some kitchen string tied to the ends that Huckleberry Finn or Tom Sawyer might have used. Already, Hopkins is an excellent shot, considering his youth and inexperience.

Led by Minden resident John Hill, Hopkins is just one of growing number of people who are now enjoying the sport of archery.

Hill runs the area's only indoor archery range and is genuinely surprised at how popular the sport is now. Originally, the range was for adults only, but Hill soon found that children were even more interested.

"What we had in mind was a way to keep the adults in shape during the winter, but what we found was we had so many kids coming out that we had to make a separate night for them," says Hill.

Hill started selling archery equipment as an off-shoot of his bait and tackle business on Highway 35 last year. Before then, there was no bow hunting allowed in the area, not because of environmental concerns, but due to a lack of interest.

Now there's a growing anti-gun feeling and more people are turning to bows for recreation and hunting pursuits. The Ministry of Natural Resources issued 30,000 bow hunting tags this year, a large increase over a decade ago says the president of the Ontario Association of Archers (O.A.A.), Joan MacDonald.

The O.A.A. has about 1,000 members involved in Olympic-style archery, a number which has remained fairly consistent over the years. However, participation in bow hunting and three dimensional hunting events, where fake animals are set up in the woods, has increased by "leaps and bounds" says MacDonald.

"I would say ten years ago I wouldn't have known about 3-D events at all, but now they're all over. Unfortunately, the Olympic side of the sport is not increasing at the rate we would like."

One three dimensional hunting events is set to take place in Peterborough on August 23.

MacDonald says there are several reasons why bow hunting has increased, one of which is the enjoyment of spending an afternoon in the woods. She also says the difficulty of bow hunting makes it more attractive.

"If you're hunting with a bow you have to get close to the animal and that's difficult. You also can't have anything in the way. I've heard of hunters with guns who fire twice, the first time to clear the way and the second on the animal," says MacDonald adding the threat of injury is much less because you can't carry a loaded bow very far.

"It's a bit more of a challenge to hunt with a bow and there's also an anti-gun sentiment out there now," says Hill explaining archery's rapid rise in popularity. "Also, the bow season is longer than the gun season."

As well, movies like Robin Hood and Dances With Wolves which prominently feature the use of bows have contributed says Hill. Hunting with bows also improves the quality of the animals as only the old and weak are usually felled by a single arrow, while one bullet can do much more damage.

The only problem with bows and arrows is you can't really use them during winter. Not only is the hunting season over, but the cold affects your fingers which have to pull back the highly tensed nylon string. However, there's an even simpler reason.

"In the winter time you lose your arrows in the snow," says

Hopkins awaiting his turn to shoot at Hill's indoor archery range.

The range, which is upstairs at the Norm Mills Auction Centre right next to Hill's bait shop, consists of three 20 yard lanes. Two lanes are side by side while a third is partitioned off by several boards to protect the archers from strays. The third lane is used by the smallest of the children and they can get as close to the target as they want without fear of being in the way of the older, more experienced children.

"He's toast," says one child before nailing the target, a small three dimensional dummy-bear, in the flank. Another lane has a fake deer surrounded by brush while the last one has the more traditional paper target. In addition to the targets the children can blow up balloons and pin them on the board and the fake animals. Not only does this give them a specific target, but also makes a loud popping sound which the younger ones seem to like.

"We shot outside last year, but it's a little more risky," says Hill explaining the need for an indoor range. "And it also depends on how the weather is and how many bugs are out."

Hill had a bit of trouble finding a place that could handle an indoor archery range, but Norm Mills offered to let Hill use his building which is almost perfect for the job as there isn't much upstairs that could be damaged by an arrow.

Most of the children who come to the range have parents who are archers or hunters. Hill likes the parents to attend the Tuesday night shooting sessions for children and credits them with helping to get the program off the ground. The parents can help supervise the kids and also offer support and encouragement.

An even more important service the adults can perform is to teach the children how to properly use and take care of their equipment. Hill is constantly kept busy answering questions, tightening bows and fixing arrows, but he still takes time to show newcomers how to properly shoot. But perhaps his most time-consuming task is making sure the children learn proper safety.

To one child, Hill says, "You shouldn't leave your bow on the floor, it could get stepped on." To another he cautions, "Don't pull the bow in here, wait until we get upstairs."

On this Tuesday night, there are 15 children, all boys, and three other adults besides Hill who have come mainly through word-of-mouth as Hill has not advertised the range. Nor does he need to advertise because he has all the children he can handle right now. Hill says there are about five regulars missing and expects more to be missing in the near future because baseball is starting up.

On Thursday nights Hill says up to six adults will hone their skills on the range.

The children are well behaved and most concentrate on shooting although the youngest ones do get distracted easily. One runs around squeezing his hand in his armpit, but stays far away from the shooters.

Twelve-year-old Chuck Hopkins takes careful aim at John Hill's indoor archery range in Minden. Hopkins has been going to the range since March.

Rising anti-gun sentiments make bow hunting attractive

"What we'd like to see is more parents because we don't run a baby-sitting service. Most of the adults are archers themselves so we teach the kids our bad habits," says Hill with a smile. "As a rule, the kids learn better from parents other than their own. They also learn a lot from listening to the older kids."

One parent who has brought his son to the range is Bob Sully. He has been bow hunting for 20 years, but always had to go up north or down around Lindsay to hunt because of the lack of a bow hunting season in the Minden area. To practice, he would set up targets in his backyard, but he says he finds the indoor range more satisfactory.

"I used to hang around 4 or 5 guys who used to hunt and I wanted to hunt so I learned how to do it. I've always had a knack for it," says Sully.

Sully would like to see photographs of the animals the bow hunters kill put up on the wall.

"I think photos would make it more interesting and people could see we actually do hunt."

Sully's son, Dan, is shooting on the third lane. Dan enjoys the sport as much as his father does and this year gave up baseball so that he could practice archery. Sully is not sure how long his son's passion for the sport will last, but Dan rarely strays away from the lane even when it's not his turn as most of the other kids do.

The sport takes a fair amount of skill and dedication says

Hill, as well as an expensive initial outlay. A compound bow costs anywhere between $200 and $1200. Arrows range in price from $1.50 for a wooden model to $4.50 each for the aluminum ones. As well, a glove is usually recommended when using a bow set at a high pressure.

"It's expensive, but no more than buying a fancy pair of runners that they're all wearing now," says Hill.

The one thing that is not expensive is the fee for using the range which is $2 per one-and-a-half hour session. The money does not go into Hill's pocket. He uses the money to buy balloons, targets and the various games that are designed for archery. Some of the games sound like they belong in elementary school with names like Number Crunch, Tic Tac Toe and Alphabest. Hill says the children take almost the entire session to get through just one of the games.

But the actual games are secondary on the children's minds. They enjoy playing them, but it's just another target. They seem to enjoy shooting the animals most.

Chuck Hopkins is the last one at the range beside Hill and his eight-year-old son, Micheal. Chuck's waiting for his mother to pick him up, but he doesn't seem to mind waiting.

"It's the challenge of it that I like," says Hopkins before firing yet another arrow at the bear.

'Most of the adults are archers themselves so we teach the kids our bad habits. As a rule, the kids learn better from parents other than their own.'

Musical tribute to a Queen and an era

Traditionally, Canadians have marked the birthday of the reigning British Monarch with a noisy display of fireworks and a massive escape to a beach. People in the Haliburton Highlands area had an opportunity to try something a little different, and equally enjoyable, this year when the annual regal birthday celebrations rolled around.

The Haliburton Messiah Choir held a musical celebration of the event and treated an audience Sunday evening (May 17) to a wide and varied selection of musical numbers drawn from the era of Queen Victoria's reign. The performance was held at the Haliburton Legion Hall. (It is in fact Victoria's birthday we celebrate in mid May each year. However, it has become a moveable holiday, to create a long weekend, and a generic "birthday" for the Monarch of the day. For many people, the May holiday weekend also marks the beginning of the summer season.)

The program touched on a variety of musical styles and forms popular during the reign of Queen Victoria. Included in the evening were selections from Gilbert and Sullivan, Sir Edward German, Johann Strauss Jr., Felix Mendelssohn and folk songs, among others.

The presentation was designed to highlight various aspects of the time in which Queen Victoria reigned over the British Empire. The choir took the audience from stately formal occasions to the tongue-in-cheek lampooning evident in G&S operettas.

Among the notable solo presentations was a heart-rending temperance melody performed by Anna Edwards entitled Come Home, Father, from Ten Nights in a Bar Room. Jock Mavor's voice also rang true through the hall as he performed the Stephen Adams composition, The Ship I Love.

During the breaks between the musical presentations, choir members Wayne Cooper and Susan Wilson provided a commentary on the life and times of Queen Victoria. The narration included many interesting insights and historical facts which helped add to the enjoyment and understanding of the evening.

The concert ended in a traditional British way with the presentation of Rule Britannia and Land of Hope and Glory. Then the audience rose as the choir sang God Save The Queen and O Canada, with the everyone joining in the reprise of the national an-

Members of the Haliburton Messiah assisted in the regal birthday celebrations this past Victoria Day weekend. Under the direction of Melissa Stephens, the choir presented a concert of music first for a queen, especially if her name was Victoria. The program included lighter fare from Gilbert and Sullivan Operettas, to the more stately composition of Strauss. A portion of the choir is seen here, under the direction of Stephens, right, during their Sunday night concert.

It was a light and enjoyable evening and the choir, under the direction of Melissa

Stephens deserves full credit for mounting this special tribute.

For those in the audience who needed the traditional Canadian ending to the weekend, the concert was timed to allow patrons to stroll down to nearby Head Lake just in time to witness the community's annual holiday fireworks display.

Explosive growth rate cannot be sustained

As the world undergoes unprecedented change, our lives and knowledge about our surroundings have become increasingly fractured into disconnected fragments that shatter our links with the past and the future.

Stability and continuity were once a dependable part of life, but now change is the most predictable aspect of the world we live in.

In fact, politicians and business leaders do everything they can to stimulate such change by attempting to maximize economic growth and development. And because change has become such a familiar part of life, it seems normal, so it's difficult to consider its long-term implications.

We are in the midst of an unprecedented and catastrophic increase in human number, technological power and ecological destruction that cannot continue. The unsustainability of such growth is not speculation or wishful thinking; it is an inescapable consequence of living in a finite world. No amount of economic daydreaming or technological optimism can render that reality avoidable.

Perhaps the most dramatic means of making tangible the limits to our current way of life is to see for yourself by drawing a graph. Take an ordinary piece of paper, draw the horizontal axis and mark it off in units of three or four centimetres to a total of eight units.

Let each of these units represent 100,000 years so eight of them encompass the entire sweep of our species' existence on Earth. You can see that a 10th of each unit on the horizontal axis represents 10,000 years or about the length of time spanning the beginning of agricultural revolution to the present.

On the vertical axis mark off units in three or four centimetre lengths. To begin with, each unit can stand for one billion human beings, although later, you can use the same graph to plot per-capita consumption or garbage output, tropical rain-forest destruction, number of cars, toxic pollution, etc.

Now we can plot the total global population of human beings from the appearance of our species up the birth of Jesus

"Clearly those curves will level off....the question is how and when."

Christ. During that time, the rise in numbers was imperceptible in people's lives, since a tiny increment would be added to global totals over thousands of years as our species fanned out across the globe.

At the time of Christ's birth, it is estimated that there may have been a quarter of a billion people, so a line can be drawn from zero at the origin of Homo sapiens to 250 million in the last two millennia of 800,000 years.

It took almost two millennia more for our total population to finally hit a billion about 1850. Next plot on your graph, the second billion 80 years later by 1930, the third billion 28 years later, the fourth billion in another 16 years and the fifth billion 14 years later in 1988.

By 1998, we will hit six billion and by 2050, there could be 10 billion of us. Now sit back and look at the curve and you will see that the line is essentially vertical, leaping straight off the page in the very last instant of human existence!

If the plot is repeated but now on the incidence or impact of technological innovation such as cars, planes, computers, chemicals, etc. the curves are even steeper and only appear on the graph within the last 100 years which is within a hair's width of the total time we have been on the earth.

Nothing can continue at this rate of change - even cancers which grow in a similar way, eventually stop (with death of the victim, of course).

Clearly those curves WILL level off and turn down. The only questions are when and how.

Will we continue on the course we're on and let nature take its course through war, famine and disease or we can hope there is still time and institute heroic measures to bring the curve down more gradually? There are many who believe it is already too late to deliberately turn the curve down gently and that the drop will be catastrophically precipitous.

In spite of the frightening shape of the curves, our economic and political leaders all act as if the line going straight up were completely normal, indeed, desirable and necessary even when it is obvious the explosive growth is without precedent and unsustainable.

Every political and business decision seems to be based on the assumption that bringing the curve down is simply unacceptable, but the alternative with every passing day is a nature-imposed drop that will be all the greater. Future generations of people, if any remain, will curse us for our shortsightedness.

Trent/Severn water levels report

(Once again this year, The Times will be publishing the regular reports supplied by Parks Canada regarding water levels in the Trent/Severn water system. While the majority of our readership is not located on the canal system, the lakes of Haliburton County are used as reservoirs for the waterways controlled by Parks Canada on the Trent/Severn system. These reports are mailed to us weekly through the summer and may seem to be somewhat dated. However, we do believe they provide a reference point nonetheless as to how and why the water levels of Haliburton County Lakes are being manipulated.)

March and April were colder than normal and seemed to result in a delay of the spring run-off. The run-off volume so far, however, has been very close to normal and the reservoir lakes rested at 96.4% on Wednesday, May 13.

The week leading up to the opening of the navigation today (May 15), has seen a sharp decline in inflow of the lakes and reservoir and canal areas. Flow was reduced along most of the canal route to make the river sections safe for boating. Wetter weather could easily have delayed the opening. Only a small surplus remains in most locations which will be used first when evaporation becomes noticeable in June. This should delay the time for drawing water from the reserve lakes.

Soyers Lake association holds spring meeting

by Bruce Birrell

The Soyers Lake Rate-payers Association's spring meeting was held at PineStone Inn on Saturday evening, May 16, 1992. The guest speaker was Larry Urbach, Squadron Training Officer for the Peterborough Squadron, Canadian Power and Sail Squadrons. He spoke about boating safety, safe refuelling of boats, personal flotation devices and safe water-skiing.

Ross Partridge, Chairman of the Pollution Control committee, explained that he was still awaiting written reports from the Ministry of the Environment on the lake water testing program for the past two years. He added that due to budget cuts, the Ministry will no longer provide secchi discs for testing. His record of the tests he had carried out over the years revealed a slow process of enrichment, but he said that Soyers Lake still remains in reasonably good shape due to its calcareous rock formation plus its situation at the head of a chain of lakes. Ross drew the members' attention to the recent formation of a new group, the Haliburton Highlands Field Naturalists, of which the well-known writer R.D. Lawrence is a member.

Bruce Birrell, Neighbourhood Watch and Publicity chairman, reported that Soyers Lake experienced a quiet winter, in spite of an increase in break-ins in some other lake areas and in Haliburton Village. He expressed appreciation for the publicity given to the Association's activities in the local press, particularly the front page coverage of the fall meeting last October in the Haliburton

Echo. He noted that the Echo had also published articles about several Soyers Lake residents, including Bob Thompson as the mainstay of the 4 C's operation which provides food to needy Haliburton citizens, Earl Haynes who took part in a swim-athon to raise money for the Heart and Stroke Foundation, and the Birrells' efforts to help a family in Russia who are suffering severe privation. There were also photographs of members of the Campbell family - Don and Helen Campbell who won a trophy in the annual Haliburton Highlands mixed bonspiel, while their grandchildren, Katie and Shane both won awards at school for physical excellence and athletic ability and Katie won a bronze medal for figure skating.

Treasurer Neal Harris and lake stewardship chairman

Dennis Good presented their reports. The members agreed that the annual Corn Roast should be held as usual in August. The Association voted to give a donation of $100 to the Sandy Bannon Memorial Fund towards a helicopter landing pad for Minden Hospital. It was mentioned that Fire Chief Don Booth had just completed 30 years of service and the secretary was directed to write him a letter of sincere congratulations.

Lew McCorriston, President, reported briefly on the spring and fall meetings of FOCA where topics discussed included planning reform, lake stewardship, changes to the capital gains tax legislation and environmental concerns.

The directors of the Association will be meeting shortly to deal with outstanding business and to plan summer activities.

Minden Women's Institute meeting features talk by public health nurse

Sixteen members and two guests were made welcome at the May 20th meeting of the Minden Women's Institute at The Library Cultural Centre. After the usual opening, Margaret Graham of the Haliburton Health Unit spoke to us on visits with your doctor with some ideas we might not think about. We showed our appreciation for her coming.

The roll call of verses we learned at school brought back memories and were very amusing.

The cards sent since last meeting numbered 17 and were reported on by Irene Moore and collections for this fund and Pennies For Friendship were collected.

Mary Cox and Doris Grant gave us details of required goods for the courses on May 28 at Common Room with those attending both courses bring box lunch, with collection to take care of expenses. Members offered to make articles for Minden Fair exhibit and these to come at the next meeting. Ladies had brought goods for our Grocery Draw and tickets were taken to be sold before our July 3rd bake sale.

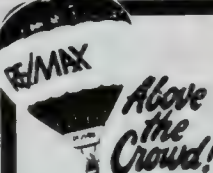

Mary Cox, District Director, gave a report of Victoria East District Annual at Bobcaygeon May 19th and there is no expense for the mileage, thanks ladies. Congratulations to the Victoria East Vice Presidents, Jean Lacey and Mary Cox and also to Eleanor Crane newly elected V.E. District President. We are all to bring cookies to our "Drop-In" Tea on June 6 at this Common Room with Tweedsmuir

Residents enjoy canine performers

Volunteers came in Tuesday afternoon to aid Residents to play a few games of cards. We thank the ladies greatly.

Wednesday Doris took some of us to Hawk Lake on the bus. It was a beautiful day.

The ground was literally covered with white trilliums. We thank Doris, Mrs. Marks and Gregg for a soothing and lovely trip.

In the evening Earl Cooper and Kathy Owens came and gave us a lovely evening of music. They were off to Victoria, B.C. early the next morning. Thanks for coming.

St. Margaret's Anglican Church, Wilberforce, provided and served a beautiful and delicious tea on Thursday. The ladies were Pat Grant, Edith Daniels, Elsie Lewis, Edna Bowers and Heather Hope. Elsie Lewis played the piano and the other ladies and residents sang. Our heart felt thanks to you.

Shirley Howe and Julie Jones called bingo Thursday evening. We truly thank them.

Friday being Happy Hour, the Haliburton Line Dancers were here. Ed Feyar acted as music man. There were 12 ladies and three men. We thank them very much. Since Marie McPhail has decided to leave Hyland Crest, Doris made a lovely decorated cake as a farewell gesture and it was served during the Happy Hour - best wishes Marie!

Doris needed something for the afternoon, so she called Rhonda Francis to see if they could organize a show for that day at 2:00. John and Rhonda arrived with their dogs and Joan and Wally Bunn with their dogs, equipment, tunnels, hoops, jumps, and planks to walk. They soon had it in place. The catch was the dogs had not done these things. After a little coaxing, they finally did them on their own. There was a black and white Candra Sheltie, a sand and white Diamond Sheltie, a Misty Blue, and a Shawna Misty Blue. The afternoon was very enjoyable. A sincere thank you. These people are the originators of the Canine Walk-a-thon.

In the evening Allan Rice pleasantly showed us movies for which we thank him. They were "Panda" and "Tatons".

Tuesday morning Chapel Service was held by Reverend Father Brian Parker. The Residents thank him very much. Terry and Norma took me out for lunch on Tuesday in my honour, went out on Sunday. At lunch on Sunday those who didn't go out received small corsages, made by five residents and a card made by other residents, wishing them a Happy Mother's Day. At one o'clock Mary Guillemine came to have reading, which we enjoyed very much, and broke the monotony of the day.

Reverend John Burgess held the Sunday evening Chapel Service with Alice Jones playing the organ. For a few older citizens, we do a pretty good job of sing song. Thanks Rev. Burgess and Alice.

Monday morning three groups of five children came to the auditorium to present a program they have been preparing. There were three teachers, 5A - Bonnie Berry: Virginia Reel and a Rap dance, composed and rehearsed by the pupils, themselves. 5B - Dennis Baker: dance to recorders. 5C-Sybil Roodenburg: also danced to recorders. The program was very pleasing. It brought back memories of our youth. The calling for the square dances has changed since we danced. Thanks for entertaining us.

since we weren't together Sunday, afterward we went shopping.

Saturday, as usual, was very quiet. Many of the residents received flowers, etc. for Mother's Day, and many
